THE CASE FOR AI THROWN OUT; AUSTRALIAN BREEDING OFFICIALS RELIEVED

By Richard Zachariah

The long-running and controversial A$10-million case to allow artificial insemination when breeding Australian Thoroughbreds has been defeated.

Judge Alan Robertson has ruled against the application by hobby breeder and former leviathan bookmaker Bruce McHugh to remove the restrictions against AI and found that Australian rules of racing that ban it are not anti-competitive nor a restriction of trade. Crucially, Judge Robertson said in an exhaustive 368-page judgment that has taken 13 months to compile that outlawing of AI in horses is not contrary to the trades practices/anti-trust act. Judge Robertson said the court was not interested in the availability or not of AI, but only if its unlawfulness contradicted the rules of competition. Clearly, he said, it wasn't.

During last year's six-week trial in Sydney's Federal Court, more than 30 witnesses from Australia, France,

Australian superstar Black Caviar
Horsephotos

Ireland, United Kingdom and Hong Kong argued the case for and against AI, with McHugh claiming the banning of AI was contrary to the act, while racing and breeding officialdom arguing it was not a restraint of trade. Officials from the Australian Racing Board and Australian Stud Book made submissions based on the damage legalizing AI would do to Australia's A$200-million dollar trade to the rest of the world which outlaws the practice. This evidence proved critical in the published findings of Judge Robertson, who mentioned several times he was mindful of international standards and Australia's role in it. In the judgment, the Judge was supportive of the status quo and the dangers of changing it.

Michael Duffy, the Chairman of the ARB, welcomed the decision upholding the validity of the Australian rules of racing in respect to the definition of a Thoroughbred.

"We have always maintained the naturally bred Thoroughbred was the basis of the domestic and international sport of racing, and AI proponents were free to establish their own industry as they wished," Duffy explained. "This case has created uncertainty which will lift following the decision," he added.

CAN NYRA BE GREAT AGAIN?

By Bill Finley, special to espn.com

David Skorton, the president of Cornell who has taken over as Chairman of the New York Racing Association, and his new Board of Directors have officially begun the process of picking up the broken pieces and rebuilding a racing organization that went off the rails. It's up to them to point NYRA in some sort of direction, but I'm not sure they have necessarily figured out what direction that is. I hope they will take their lead from Board member and celebrity chef Bobby Flay.

"We don't have a product that the public wants to go see."

-- Bobby Flay, NYRA Board member

"We don't have a product that the public wants to go see," Flay said at last week's NYRA Board meeting. "We need to build the infrastructure of the racing product. We need to start doing that now, not a year from now. NYRA was always the leader of this industry and we have lost that. We're not at the top, we're somewhere in the middle."

Flay is right. Like a lot of us, he first embraced racing in an era when there were the New York Racing Association tracks and there was everyone else. NYRA had the best horses, jockeys, trainers, purses. It had the most important races. Its list of leading owners was a who's who of American aristocracy. Cont. p4

ARB chief executive Peter McGauran said he was relieved the case was over.

"It's settled and I am relieved. This case has taken a long time and has been very testing," he stated. "It is positive for breeding that our rules that have operated for over 200 years are not anti-competitive or a restriction of trade."

Asked about the future if the AI supporters continue to press their case outside the law, McGauran stated, "They are welcome to rent out our racecourses after we have used them. They can develop a separate racing code if they like."

But that will not be the future, according to McHugh.

"For me it's over. I gave it my best shot and I was wrong," he commented. "The law is the law. Our witnesses didn't convince Judge Robertson that the law is anti-competitive. He also was not convinced that if Australia went alone it would not be to our disadvantage commercially," he continued.

McHugh, who financed his own case costing more than A$3.5 million, is used to such pressure and cut his teeth duelling with the world's biggest punter Kerry Packer, sometimes turning over A$20 million in an afternoon with individual bets of A$4 million.

He began his personal crusade four years ago after retiring from bookmaking and out of frustration and a personal sense of grievance of what he saw as official disdain for his plan to AI some Thoroughbred mares on his property. The case had garnered international interest and drew a comment from Louis Romanet, Chairman of the International Federation of Horse Racing Authorities who welcomed the no case against AI.

"The dismissal of the challenge is a good outcome and I welcome it," Romanet said in a release. "The definition of what is a Thoroughbred is set out clearly in the International Agreement on Breeding, Racing and Wagering and is adopted by all of the IFHA Member countries throughout the world. It requires a natural covering."

Trevor Lobb, chairman of Thoroughbred Breeders Australia, said the decision would allow Australians to continue to send horses around the world and investors to buy with confidence at upcoming yearling sales.

The Sport of Kings, indeed. Belmont Park epitomized class. Saratoga was about history and charm. Aqueduct had not yet deteriorated into the eyesore that it is today.

Things change. Other racing circuits have risen; OTB, with the way it was structured, did immeasurable damage to New York racing. The Vanderbilts don't own horses anymore. But these shouldn't be excuses, and maybe that's exactly what they have become. Somewhere along the way, New York racing lowered its standards, which began an inexorable decline. Being the very best no longer mattered.

This began way back in 1976 when the inner dirt track at Aqueduct opened. For the first time, NYRA offered a long season of dreary winter racing and cards filled with cheap, slow horses that belonged at Finger Lakes and not a top-class racetrack. The Bloomingdales of racing restocked its shelves and became a K-Mart every year for five months.

At least once that was over you still had Belmont and Saratoga, where NYRA racing was pretty much still NYRA racing. In time, that changed, too. Understanding that races with large fields normally out-handle races with small fields, NYRA pretty much stopped caring about quality.

The idea became to get as many horses in the starting gate as possible and the best way to do that was to card as many cheap races as possible. They gave us $16,000 maiden claimers, $15,000 claimers for horses who have never won two races and all sorts of other rock-bottom events that would have been considered unacceptable only a few years ago.

Unable to spend an adequate amount of money on its facilities because of political roadblocks, NYRA also had to take shortcuts when it came to its tracks, particularly Aqueduct. The Big A is so dirty and in such a state of disrepair that NYRA Board Member Leonard Riggio said he will no longer attend the races there.

So this is where we're at. There's too much racing, way too much bad racing, Belmont is worn and Aqueduct is in terrible condition. The NYRA brand doesn't stand for what it used to. It's not even close.

With a new Board and a slew of problems, the New York Racing Association is at a crossroads and Skorton, Flay, Riggio and the rest can take it in one direction or the other.

Perhaps what NYRA has done over recent years makes sense, at least from a bottom-line standpoint. A never-ending racing schedule with lots of bad races with big fields might just make NYRA more money than a less-is-more option. I don't know.

But I strongly suspect that it has backfired. In his restaurants, Flay may have made more money in the short-term had he chosen to go with cheaper, less tasty cuts of meat. But he is a smart businessman, knows that the Bobby Flay name means excellence and chooses to serve his customers nothing but exquisite meals. That philosophy has made him wildly successful and, I assume, wealthy. He wants the same for the New York Racing Association because he believes in unwaveringly high standards and knows that's a guaranteed recipe for success. NYRA used to be to racing what Flay's restaurants are to dining. Now it's more like a Denny's.

The racetracks, in particular Aqueduct, have to be fixed up. That will likely happen now that Skorton is there, which means things can start getting done. Another project that should be on the front burner is the downsizing of Belmont, a massive structure built for another era. Its emptiness creates an atmosphere that is a turn-off for potential and existing fans.

More importantly, NYRA has to cut back significantly on its racing schedule, which is the only way it can cut out the worst races and go back to offering a first-class product day-in and day-out. Ending winter racing, four-day-a-week schedules at Belmont and five-day-a-week schedules at Saratoga are all issues that need to be seriously explored. With so much money now available for purses due to the slots money from the Aqueduct casino, there's no reason why a NYRA track should ever run some of the races it now runs.

The NYRA Board is an impressive group and Skorton is no doubt a very smart man. Better yet, this group seems committed and it seems driven. The choices it makes will shape New York racing for years to come. May it make the right decisions.

Frac Daddy a Blast from McPeek's Past

Courtesy David Joseph, Gulfstream Park

Ken McPeek closely observed Skip Away with an admiring eye while training at Gulfstream Park during the mid and late 1990s, gaining a deep respect for trainer Sonny Hine's big gray champion.

So when a colt he had purchased at auction reminded him of Skip Away, he viewed the resemblance to the 1998 Horse of the Year as a decided positive. Three races into his racing career, Frac Daddy (Scat Daddy) has done nothing but feed his trainer's enthusiasm and optimism about his future.

"I was around Skip Away when Sonny Hine had him, and this horse reminds me of him. He's out of a Skip Away mare. Physically, he looks like Skip Away, so that's kind of neat," McPeek said. "Having been around a few good horses in my time, I think this horse could be any kind."

Frac Daddy, whose gray coat and large frame help to remind his trainer of Skip Away, has demonstrated a lot of potential in his three starts thus far.

The late-developing colt worked his way through traffic to finish second in his career debut at Belmont Park Oct. 4 before scoring in a 1 1/16-mile race at Churchill Downs by nearly 10 lengths Nov. 3 (video).

"The most impressive was his first race," McPeek said. "It looked like he had every reason to lay down, but he kept fighting back to finish second, kind of weaving his way through traffic."

Three weeks after winning, he made a sweeping move on the turn into the homestretch to take a narrow lead in deep stretch before multiple stakes winner

Uncaptured fought back to post a neck decision over the McPeek trainee in the GII Kentucky Jockey Club S. at Churchill Downs (video).

"The second race was just dominant. We knew he was good. I was a little concerned about how he'd handle Churchill. It was amazing how powerful he was," McPeek said. "In his third race, I thought I could have trained him a little harder. He might have beaten the other horse. He got a little tired." Cont. p7

The performance was certainly strong enough for McPeek to expect big things from Frac Daddy.

"Having been around a few good horses in my time, I think this horse could be any kind," said McPeek, who saddled Harlan's Holiday for a victory in the 2002 GI Florida Derby. "If he improves the way I expect him to, we've got a big chance to be in the middle of a lot of nice races."

Frac Daddy, a son of 2007 Florida Derby winner Scat Daddy, is expected to be very active at Gulfstream.

"I'd like to get one race into him before the [Feb. 23] Fountain of Youth and then come back for the [Mar. 30] Florida Derby," McPeek said.

Frac Daddy has already turned out to be a bargain for Magic City Thoroughbred Partners and McPeek, who purchased him at the 2011 Keeneland September sale for $50,000.

"He was a big strong horse with a great hip and a lot of substance to him," he said.

McPeek is obviously hoping that Frac Daddy will perform well enough at Gulfstream to earn a stall in the starting gate for this year's GI Kentucky Derby.

"I think this horse has got a good a chance as any horse I've had in my career," he said.

The McPeek-trained Tejano Run finished second behind Thunder Gulch in the 1995 Kentucky Derby.

"I made a mistake going to Fair Grounds that winter. If I had brought my horses [to Florida] that winter instead of Fair Grounds, I think I would have won the Derby," said McPeek, whose training schedule for Tejano Run was compromised by weather.

"It was one of those odd winters. It did nothing but rain down there," McPeek continued. "It was nasty."

Back in the Sunshine State, McPeek is hoping Frac Daddy's winter at Gulfstream Park will set him up for a winning effort at Churchill Downs on the first Saturday in May.

Batting .500 on the main track entering this, Citrus Kid disputed the early pace from between rivals, as heavily favored El Padrino chased the leading group. While Citrus Kid hugged the fence on the turn and into the lane, El Padrino was forced to cover ground, but had every chance with a furlong to race. Fitness may have found him out, however, as Citrus Kid stayed on determinedly to the wire for the minor upset. "He ran well," trainer Todd Pletcher said of the runner-up. "He's a big, heavy horse. We thought he could need to run a time or two to get going again. I'm pleased with what he did today."

Back in a much more sensible spot last time, the homebred ran on to be third at this level at Churchill Nov. 24 and was the 6-5 chalk to clear this hurdle. Settled in midpack for the opening five furlongs, Summit County followed the move of Made in U.S.A. A 6-1 chance in this field with a couple of well-meant firsters, Jim's Lonesa won the break and set a decent pace down inside. He drifted a bit wide into the stretch, but kept to his work late and reported home a 3/4-length victress. Spring Reason (El Prado {Ire}) closed well for second, while favored Creation (Mizzen Mast), slow out, rallied strongly to be a respectable fourth. JAY EYE SEE (c, 2, Curlin--England's Rose {GSW, $136,686}, by Nureyev) hesitated at the start of his Nov. 1 bow at Calder before settling for second, then dropped one spot in a similar event Nov. 18. He gave a solid account of himself when fourth at 10-1 in his first local try Dec. 6 and was getting blinkers for the first time here as a 9-2 shot. Showing improved gate speed with the equipment change, Jay Eye See was in front after a furlong and was called upon for a bit more run on the turn. Still travelling comfortably and with nothing making any sort of impact from behind, the bay kicked it into another gear in the lane and streaked home to score by 7 1/4 lengths. Tizrobertcharles (Bwana Charlie) was second at 46-1, while favored Oistin's Town (Speightstown) never factored in 10th. Jay Eye See is the 15th winner for his freshman sire (by Smart Strike), who famously broke his maiden at this venue in 2007 en route to the first of his two Horse of the Year titles. + CHEE (c, 3, Empire Maker--Skipper Tale, by Tale of the Cat) was the even-money chalk for his Wednesday debut at Gulfstream, but hopped at the start, spotting his rivals a handful of lengths. Risky Asset (Smart Strike), the 6-5 second choice, took them along at a solid clip up front, but Chee gained ground at the rail to take closer approaching the far turn. The Flay runner was put to a strong drive and needed a few strides to find top gear, but the attractive bay colt came after the pacesetter turning for home, collared and passed that one entering the final furlong and went on to a promising 2 1/4-length victory. "I thought that Johnny did a really good job not rushing him up after he broke like that," Flay commented. "A lot of times when they break poorly, especially if they're the favorite, the jockey gets a little nervous and tends to ride them real quick to get back into contention. He went through the field pretty quick, but he did it actually very easily getting a good trip on the rail. He finished really well; I got a little nervous at the 3/8-pole because it looked like he wasn't gaining on the horse." The winner is out of a full-sister to Grade III-winning sprinter Ashley's Kitten and a 3/4-sister to MGSW Heart Ashley (Lion Heart). Sales history: $40,000 yrl '10 KEESEP. Bobby Flay's Chee lived up to the hype in his belated Gulfstream unveiling, delivering a promising victory as the chalk after a flat-footed beginning in Wednesday's opener.

Named after his childhood friend Johnny Chee, Flay kept his buddy in the dark until he knew for sure that Chee would make it to the races.

"We used to cut out of school and go to the track when we were teenagers," Flay said from his Manhattan offices, before adding with a laugh, "We're actually still doing that."

Flay continued, "He didn't know that I named the horse after him until he was entered. It was hard for me to keep it a secret."

“He called me from the Meadowlands simulcast when I think the horses hit the eighth pole,” Flay added.

Known for building his high-profile operation around well-bred fillies and mares, the celebrity chef applied a very different approach to acquire the handsome Empire Maker colt for $40,000 as a Keeneland September yearling.

“He’s not my typical horse, whatsoever,” Flay admitted. “This is before Empire Maker made a lot of noise, and I was very bullish on him at the time. I looked at his pedigree, and although he was in Book 5, I thought that this may be one of those horses that just sort of gets pushed in the middle of the stack.”

Flay is quick to credit veterinarian Scott Hay for green-lighting the purchase despite some potential issues.

“He had something with an ankle or knee, and there were a couple of people worried about it, but Hay convinced me that it wasn’t going to affect how he ran,” Flay revealed. “Horse racing is obviously a gamble,

Bobby Flay

but this was a total gamble on my part. Usually I buy fillies with good pedigrees that have intrinsic value so that even if they can’t run or don’t run well, they still have value. If this horse never ran, he was basically worth close to nothing.”

Chee, produced by a full-sister to graded heroine Ashley’s Kitty and 3/4-sister to multiple graded winner Heart Ashley (Lion Heart), hinted potential in the a.m. at Palm Meadows, most recently completing a four-furlong move in :48 Dec. 15. According to Flay, Chee was up to five-eighths in his training during his 2-year-old season before enduring a minor setback.

“The only thing that I’m patient with in my life is my horses,” Flay concluded. “As J.J. Pletcher once told me, and I love this quote, ‘Either you give them time, or they’ll make you give them time.’”

In Chee’s case, it’s a good thing that Flay listened. - SS

Scratched down to leave from the rail, Some Legs was ridden away from the gate to gain a spot and was tucked in neatly by Ryan Curatolo to save some ground. Voting is available at www.drf.com/eclipse and will continue until 3:00 p.m. (ET) Jan. 3. The prize winner will be drawn on or about Jan. ADW Roadblock in Illinois Next Year:

Advance deposit wagering may not be available in Illinois next year due to legislation issues. The Illinois Racing Board met Dec. 18 and announced, "the Board denied the applications for advance deposit wagering licenses to operate in calendar year 2013 based on the lack of statutory authorization as of January 1, 2013. In addition, pursuant to Section 9(k) of the Act, the Board's Executive Director is appointed as a delegate to temporarily act on the ADW applications for 2013, if necessary, as soon as the Governor is able to sign a bill passed by the Illinois General Assembly extending advance deposit wagering, and until such time as the Board is able to convene a meeting to vote on the ADW applications."

Britain*SIX FACING CORRUPTION CHARGES

Jockey Eddie Ahern and former riders' agent Martin Raymond are among six individuals charged with serious breaches of racing rules as part of the British Horseracing Authority's ongoing investigation into corruption. Ahern is accused of breaching three rules of racing, which includes allegedly stopping Judgethemoment (Judge T C) from running on his merits when finishing last of seven at Lingfield Jan. 21, 2011. His charges relate to five races between Sept. 2009 and Feb. 2011, and he is likely to be "warned off" from the sport if found guilty. All six have been summoned to appear before a BHA disciplinary hearing slated to take place between Apr. 29 and May 3 next year.

Who We Are: The Thoroughbred Aftercare Alliance (TAA) is a non-profit organization whose goal is to help retired Thoroughbreds.

Our Mission: The TAA serves both as an accrediting body for aftercare facilities that care for retired Thoroughbreds following the conclusion of their careers and a fundraising body to support these approved facilities.

What We Do: The TAA's goal is to establish industry-wide fundraising, from all entities involved in the Thoroughbred industry (from breeders and owners to racetracks and jockeys to fans) so that our retired athletes can be cared for at the end of their careers.

How You Can Help: Beginning with the 2013 sales calendar, major sales companies will enable buyers and consignors to automatically contribute .05% of their respective purchases or gross sales directly to TAA. Participating sales companies will contribute an additional .05% from their gross sales receipts as well.
