SANAN RESIGNS FROM BC BOARD

Padua Stables' owner Satish Sanan handed in his letter of resignation to the Breeders' Cup Board of Directors Thursday. He has served the organization for a decade, but said he has been frustrated by a lack of transparency and open communication and has suffered personal attacks from fellow board members who accused him of leaking information to the media. "It's gotten to the point where, I think the few people on the board who had control, they don't like things that I believe in, and that a whole bunch of other people believe in," Sanan said.

"When you disagree on an issue, they take it personally. They were attacking me personally for leaking information to the media and I said I've never done that." He added, "They don't believe in open communication. They want to control everything. They want everything going from them. They have done this for many years. It's gotten to the point where it is no longer in the best interest of my mind and my health [to remain on the board]." Cont. p4

RULING THE WORLD

Ruler of the World (Ire) (Galileo {Ire}) has taken longer than his half-brother Duke of Marmalade (Ire) to create an impact on the track, but he looked as if he was ready to make up for lost time with this power-packed display on Chester's "Roodeye" in Thursday's G3 Chester Vase. Well-supported coming into this Derby trial on the back of a 10-furlong debut win in a maiden at The Curragh Apr. 7, the bay sported cheekpieces and tracked Mister Impatience early with Ryan Moore asking him to extend approaching the home turn. In front at the top of the 1 1/2-furlong straight, he hit top gear soon after and drew clear for an emphatic fourth renewal for Ballydoyle since 2007. "He did it nicely and the race worked out well for him, as he got a nice lead," his rider said. "He's still a bit green, but once I grabbed hold of him he lengthened really well. He'll learn a lot and going round here will have done him good." Part-owner Paul Smith added, "Aidan thinks quite a lot of him. He's been working well at home, but we thought he might be a little bit green and a little bit babyish. I think with the tight, turning track and the crowd, it was a good choice and it paid dividends." Cont. pX

HOLLYWOOD PARK TO CEASE OPERATIONS

The Hollywood Park Land Company issued a statement Thursday stating that it would not seek 2014 live racing dates at Hollywood Park. Hollywood President Jack Liebau informed the California Horse Racing Board of the decision in a letter dated May 8. The Land Company, which purchased Hollywood Park from Churchill Downs in 2005, stated it would continue racing for a minimum of three years, and during that time, would attempt to improve racing's business model at the Inglewood oval.

"Without success, the Land Company spent millions on two statewide initiatives that would have brought slot machines to Hollywood Park and thereby assured the continuation of racing," said Hollywood Park President Jack Liebau. "Unfortunately, that didn't happen in California, which would have turned things around as they have in other states as in New York and New Mexico. Sadly for we who love racing and Hollywood Park, it was simply a matter of time."

Liebau added, "The property has a higher and better use than it has being a racetrack. This property is on 'go'. They started the planning with the City of Inglewood in 2005 and they have gone through that entitlement process, so that is in place. It looks like ground will be broken in January of 2014."

The 2013 meet begins Nov. 7 and continues through Dec. 22. The Hollywood stable area is also expected to close at the end of the year.

ORB GEARING UP FOR PREAKNESS

Shug McGaughey, trainer of Ky Derby winner Orb (Malibu Moon), is looking forward to next week's GI Preakness S. "I found that I'm a bit more nervous than I was leading up to the Derby," McGaughey said. "I'm looking forward to it. Like I said in Louisville, I can't wait for a week from Saturday."

Groupie Doll Returns

Last year's champion female sprinter Groupie Doll (Bowman's Band) returned to Churchill Downs Monday after a three-month stint at Indian Ridge Farm in Frankfort. Trainer Buff Bradley, who owns Groupie Doll in partnership with his father Fred, Carl Hurst and Brent Burns, sent the 5-year-old home in early February after she was not training to his satisfaction at Gulfstream Park. "Is it a 180-degree turnaround from Florida?--Absolutely," said Bradley.

Goldencents Gallops

Goldencents (Into Mischief) returned to the track for the first time since his 17th-place effort in the GI Kentucky Derby yesterday at Pimlico. The only Preakness contender already on the grounds, the colt jogged once around the Pimlico oval with jockey Kevin Krigger in the irons.

Horsemen Weigh in on Hollywood Closure...

Among those who will be undoubtedly affected by Hollywood's closure is trainer Ron Ellis, who currently has 40 horses stabled at the oval. "It was not a surprise to me, because we had been hearing over the past few months that it was very serious," said Ellis. "The nice thing about stabling at Hollywood was that I could keep all of my horses together, which was a big reason I decided to go take them over to Hollywood. I also really liked the track and the barn area and on the track itself, the turns are a little bit bigger. I thought it was just a better track to train on." Ellis, who lives only moments from Santa Anita, has trained his entire stable at Hollywood for over 10 years. "It will certainly be easier for me to get to work, and I'll just have to put in for as many stalls as I can get. The biggest inconvenience to trainers that I can see will be that trainers will have to fight for stalls at Santa Anita and then having to decide where they will have to go if they can't get stalls." Currently, Santa Anita can accommodate between 1800-1900, while the overall Southern California circuit generally consists of anywhere between 2800-3000 horses. "Basically, it will affect trainers on where they will send their second string, or in some cases, their first string," continued Ellis. "Almost everybody I've spoken to have said they will try and get stalls for Santa Anita, but it will be awfully tight." Ellis indicated he would take at least part of his team to San Luis Rey Downs Training Center in northern San Diego County if he couldn't get all the stalls he needed at Santa Anita.

San Luis Rey, also owned by Stronach Group, was leased to a group of horsemen through March, but the training facility is now back under the management of Santa Anita. Upgrades to San Luis Rey are set to begin June 2. Along with the refurbishment of the main track, plans call for the addition of a seven-furlong turf course and a turf gallop outside the one-mile main track. "The idea is to make it like Palm Meadows in Florida," said Ellis. "But it can only hold 575 horses, but we need stalls for about 500-600 more than that. So it will have to be decided whether those horses will go to Fairplex or Los Alamitos." Asked how the closure of the storied track might affect the bigger picture in Southern California, Ellis opined, "I don't think this will hurt racing in Southern California at all. What will happen is that Santa Anita and Del Mar will absorb the dates, but what it will hurt will be the convenience of being able to train where you want and keeping the horses together because everyone is going to want to be at Santa Anita." Also commenting on the closure, Hall of Fame jockey Gary Stevens added, "We knew it was coming. I'm not suprised. We felt that it was coming probably after this summer. It's sad, but it is something that we have had plenty of time to prepare for and I don't know if we have done a very good job at preparing for it as far as where all these horses that are stabled at Hollywood Park are going to go. I'm sure all the horsemen's organizations are going to get together as well as the California horse racing board to devise the best plan.

"I arrived at this decision after considerable lack of transparency, personal agendas, meetings before meetings, continued control by power brokers and personal attacks by some of the board meetings in the last meeting," Sanan continued. "I love Breeders' Cup. I love the industry. I put in a lot of my own personal resources and time and energy and, yes, I am outspoken and controversial, but I always tried to bring positive change."

Sanan said he was criticized for giving details of a Breeders' Cup meeting earlier this year at which the organization's Lasix policy was discussed. He responded, "In my view, people should know what is going on."

Asked what recommendations he would make to the Breeders' Cup and the industry as a whole, Sanan said, "I would strongly recommend, not just going through the motions, but to honestly look at where our industry is going, look at the strategic plan, define what is needed and then put a plan in place. But plans are only plans if you don't have the management that can execute. Look at the strategic plan, make sure you have the right management and the infrastructure and resources and then you just have to execute, execute, execute."

RODRIGUEZ ON FENCE WITH VYJACK

Rudy Rodriguez is still undecided on Vyjack (Into Mischief)'s participation in the May 18 GI Preakness S. Wet weather in the New York area has limited the gelding's activity since finishing 18th in the GI Kentucky Derby. "We've been babying him," Rodriguez said. "I would like to gallop him and see what's going on."

Vyjack
Adam Coglianesse

Rodriguez said a decision would be made with owner David Wilkenfeld. "I'm just going to wait and make my decision and then tell the owner what is going on," he said. "So far, everything is good. I have to talk with the owner first and see what he wants to do."

GOLDENCENTS JOGS AT PIMLICO

Goldencents (Into Mischief) returned to the track for the first time since his 17th-place effort in the GI Kentucky Derby yesterday at Pimlico. The only Preakness contender already on the grounds, the colt jogged once around the Pimlico oval with jockey Kevin Krigger in the irons.

"Basically, this morning was just to have him stretch his legs, get warmed up for tomorrow," Krigger said. "It was more to feel how good he felt and he felt perfect today. Everything was good. He was smooth, graceful on the track, and relaxed. That's all the factors you're looking for."

The GI Santa Anita Derby winner, who is expected to work Monday, is following the same pre-Preakness routine of last year's winner I'll Have Another (Flower Alley). "It was successful last year, so why change it?" asked Jack Sisterson, assistant to trainer Doug O'Neill. Of Goldencent's Thursday morning jog, Sisterson added, "This is one of the first steps training-wise leading up to the Preakness. We just jogged him and we were very happy. There was no sign of stiffness or tightness. His energy level was high. He's a very happy horse."

SHUG LOOKS FORWARD TO PREAKNESS

Shug McGaughey is still in a whirlwind after his first GI Kentucky Derby win with Orb (Malibu Moon) last Saturday, but is looking forward to the GI Preakness S. May 18.

"I found that I'm a bit more nervous than I was leading up to the Derby," McGaughey said. "I'm looking forward to it. Like I said in Louisville, I can't wait for a week from Saturday."

McGaughey is not overly concerned with the quick turn-around between Triple Crown races. He advocates the set-up, stating the time is the difficult part.

"It's my job and my people's job to try and get him over the Derby, try and get him fresh and happy again," McGaughey said. "A little breezing Monday to try to put him back in the game, then try to get him used to Pimlico."

If we get him out of the Preakness and everything is still a go, we get to relax a little longer with the three weeks, then go 1 1/2 miles here at Belmont, which will obviously be a little easier on me. I'll be living at home and Orb's going to be living at home, too."

Orb has won off a two-week break before when he was sixth in a maiden special weight at the Big A Nov. 10 and came back on Nov. 24 to break his maiden there.

"I have run him back in a hurry and he ran well off of it," McGaughey said. "What has really given me confidence is what I've seen with him coming out of his races."

Orb sat near the back of the field through blistering fractions in the Derby and ran right by the tiring pacesetters in the stretch to win. He has proven to be versatile at both coming from behind off a fast pace or running closer to the leaders on a slow pace.

"We had a fast pace in the [GII] Fountain of Youth and he won," McGaughey said. "We had a slow pace in the [GI] Florida Derby and he won. I really think in these races he has been a pretty convincing winner."

GIII Illinois Derby victor Departing (War Front) will be a new competitor for Orb in the Preakness and McGaughey calls him a "worthy opponent." He also cited Orb's Derby rivals Oxbow (Awesome Again), Will Take Charge (Unbridled's Song), and Normandy Invasion (Tapit) as possible competition in the Preakness.

"I'm not going to let myself sit around and think about who is the guy to beat and this or that," McGaughey said. "If Orb runs his race, and sitting here on Thursday afternoon, I don't see any reason why he wouldn't, I think they will all have him to beat."

The conditioner feels shipping to and getting used to Pimlico will be Orb's biggest challenge. If he wins the Preakness, he will return to his home track to run the final leg of the Triple Crown, which gives him a home-field advantage.

"It's not going to be unfamiliar for him and I think that is a pretty settling factor, not only to the people around him, but to the horse himself," McGaughey said.

DEPARTING IN THE PREAKNESS?

Departing (War Front), winner of the GIII Illinois Derby, will head to Pimlico on Wednesday to challenge last Saturday's GI Kentucky Derby victor Orb (Malibu Moon) in the GI Preakness S. May 18.

"We are happy with him," trainer Al Stall said. "He's acting like a fresh horse. He's had one breeze [4f in :49 at Churchill Downs May 2] since the race in Illinois. He is scheduled to have another one this weekend and ship over to Baltimore on Wednesday, so we are very happy with this horse."

He will be one of the few runners coming into the Preakness with more than two weeks rest, having bypassed the Derby. After a third in his fourth lifetime start in the GII Louisiana Derby, Stall felt the horse lacked the seasoning to Run for the Roses.

"[The Derby] is a tough race and he is a gelding," Stall said. "We are looking for quite a bit of longevity out of him, so we decided to pass on the Derby."

Stall felt the Illinois Derby, which had been moved back due to it's lack of Kentucky Derby points, was a better fit for Departing and would be a good Preakness prep. The gelding's performance in that race proved him right.

The conditioner feels Departing has progressed a lot in the past two months.

"This horse seems to be getting better and you can see it before your eyes," Stall said. "In the spring of the 3-year-old year, a nice 3-year-old will raise his hand and say, 'I want to get better and I'm going forward.' He certainly gives us every indication that he is that type of horse."

Stall was impressed by Orb's run in the Derby and realizes he is the horse to beat.

"We plan on going in there without hesitation and running our 'A' race," Stall said. "Whether that is good enough to beat Orb, I have no earthly idea, but all we can do it take care of our horse and bring him over there with confidence."

STEVENS READY FOR HIS 17TH PREAKNESS

Hall of fame jockey Gary Stevens is no stranger to the GI Preakness S, but this will be his first start in race since coming out of an eight-year retirement in January. He has ridden in the Preakness 17 times, been in the money on 10 occasions, and won twice with Point Given (Thunder Gulch) in 2001 and Silver Charm (Silver Buck) in 1997.

"I have been back for five months and my focus has returned every bit as much as what it had been upon my retirement," Stevens said.

He will ride his GI Kentucky Derby mount Oxbow (Awesome Again) for a shot at the black-eyed susans May 18. They finished sixth in the Run for the Roses, but Stevens was proud of his mount's effort.

"I think the thing I was most impressed about with him at the Derby, is that he was the only one of the top six horses that was part of that heated battle early on in those fast fractions that stuck around for the rest of the race," said Stevens.

There was a point in the race where Stevens even thought they had the race won.

"I thought to myself just before we entered the stretch 'Man I am going to win my fourth Derby,'" Stevens said. "It only lasted three or four seconds, but the thing that was great about him is he had every right to just chuck it in like the rest of the pacemakers did in the race and he battled on to the finish line."

Stevens hopes Oxbow settles into Pimlico well and runs in his usual manner in the Preakness for a chance to beat Derby hero Orb (Malibu Moon).

"I liked what I saw in [Orb] and I think we are seeing a colt that really has some untapped resources right now," Stevens said. "I think that he is still improving and that is kind of a scary thought."

Stevens will wait to devise his strategy until after the post positions are drawn, but plans to be on or near the lead with Oxbow on Preakness day.

Taking time to find his feet at two and three, Danadana finally began to show the talent his trainer knew was under the covers when registering a 10-furlong handicap success at Newmarket last May. Following up in Redcar's Zetland Gold Cup the following month, the bay's momentum was derailed at Glorious Goodwood, but he put that unplaced effort behind him with another score under top weight in a competitive handicap at York's Ebor meeting in August. Held up early with only Gabriel behind, he soon dropped to last as he struggled to come to terms with the turning circuit, but was cajoled into contention on the final turn when angled widest of all. As soon as he leveled up, Danadana ate up the ground to grab the lead from the rail-running long-time leader Highland Knight with 150 yards remaining and was comfortably on top at the line. "He's improved a lot since last year and he's done it well," said jockey Kieren Fallon. "I didn't think he'd like the ground, but it's fresher on the outside and not as bad as it's probably going to get--with this rain, it will turn to soft pretty soon. He's a grand, big horse and he did nothing only improve last year." Trainer Luca Cumani's son and assistant Matt Cumani added, "The ground looks quite loose and we know he doesn't like soft ground. Going round the first bend, he looked like he was going to go out into Chester town so that made it all the more impressive when he finally let go. We love him and the whole family, which includes [last year's GI Arlington Million runner-up] Afsare (GB) (Dubawi {Ire}) and he looks like Dubawi. He's a very nice, impressive horse. He's very well behaved, but has had his problems. Royal Ascot will be the target, probably the [June 21] Listed Wolferton S."

Felician, who rattled up a trio of handicap wins last summer, had managed a fourth placing behind Combat Zone in Munich's G2 Grosse Europa Meile in September before finishing last of five in the G3 Grosser Preis der Landeshauptstadt Dusseldorf over a half-furlong further at Dusseldorf the following month. Rated early towards the rear of the tightly-packed field, the bay was delivered as the gaps opened ahead inside the final furlong and had first run on Neatico in the final 50 yards. "He traveled beautifully, the pace was perfect, and in the end he showed a great turn-of-foot," jockey Lennart Hammer-Hansen said. The result proved a family affair, as the winning owner and trainer Ferdinand Leve is the husband of Janet Leve-Ostermann, owner of Gestut Haus Ittlingen and sister of Manfred Ostermann, whose Gestut Ittlingen races the favorite Neatico. The race also coincided with the winning couple's 16th wedding anniversary.

No Bolger Runners in Poulains

Trainer Jim Bolger will be without a representative in Sunday's G1 Poule d'Essai des Poulains at Longchamp after scratching both Loch Garman (Ire) (Teofilo {Ire}) and Leitir Mor (Ire) (Holy Roman Emperor {Ire}) at yesterday's forfeit stage. Their withdrawal means that a maximum of 19 colts will go to post for the mile Classic, with Marco Botti taking out Prince Faisal's Kempton maiden winner String Theory (Ire) (Medicean {GB}).

PREVIEWS

DEE-DAY

Today's G3 Dee S. has presented two Epsom Derby winners in Oath (Ire) (Fairy King) in 1999 and Kris Kin (Kris S.) four years later, and for the six protagonists assembled for the latest renewal, the distant dream is still alive. Holding the aces on established form is Qatar Racing Limited's Willie the Whipper (GB) (Whipper), who followed a first black-type success in Pontefract's Listed Silver Tankard S. in October with a seven-lengths second to Morandi (Fr) (Holy Roman Emperor {Ire}) in the G1 Criterium de Saint-Cloud the following month. In his favor will be the softening of the ground following yesterday's rain, and his Yorkshire-based trainer Ann Duffield is hoping he can put her stable on a bigger map this term. "The horse is in good order," she told PA Sport. "I think he will improve for the run, but we're really excited about running him."

I think we'll get this race out of the way before we start making future plans." Trainer Ed Dunlop holds Contributer (Ire) (High Chaparral {Ire}) in high regard and he looked on the upgrade when taking a 10-furlong conditions event at Newbury Apr. 19. "He's a horse we like and it's time to step him up in class now," he commented. "He was bought in the breeze-ups and isn't entered in the Derby. I've already said that were he to go and run very well or win his trial, then I would be keen to supplement him for a Derby, but let's see how he goes first."

BIN SUROOR TO TAKE CHARGE

Saeed bin Suroor is to assume short-term responsibility of the Moulton Paddocks base recently vacated by banned trainer Mahmood Al Zarooni, according to a statement released by Godolphin Thursday. "Saeed bin Suroor is taking over the training licence at Moulton Paddocks on a temporary basis until a new trainer is appointed by Godolphin for that property. The role is in addition to Saeed bin Suroor's responsibilities for horses based at Godolphin Stables in Newmarket. The test results for horses at Moulton Paddocks are still awaited and there will be no runners from there until they are all known," the statement read. The British Horseracing Authority subsequently confirmed that bin Suroor will be granted such a training licence once drugs tests on all of the Moulton Paddocks-based horses are returned clear. Adam Brickell, the BHA's director of integrity, said, "We have informed Saeed bin Suroor and Godolphin that the BHA will not be relicensing the yard until the test results are known for all the Godolphin-owned horses stabled in Newmarket."

Tongue-Tie for Toronado...

Sheikh Joaan bin Hamad Al Thani's Toronado (Ire) (High Chaparral {Ire}) is set to be fitted with a tongue-tie when he reappears at Royal Ascot, connections revealed yesterday. With post-race tests showing nothing untoward following his below-par effort when fourth in Saturday's G1 2,000 Guineas, the G3 Craven S. winner will race with the wind aid in the June 18 G1 St James's Palace S. "Toronado's blood has come back fine, but we suspect that he might have suffered a displaced palate which would explain why he hit the wall so quickly, so we will tie his tongue down next time," Richard Hannon Jr explained. "We also plan to dispense with the drop noseband and ride him with a little bit more restraint and, having digested our options, we have decided to bring him back for the [G1] St James's Palace S. at Royal Ascot [June 19]. The round mile should suit him perfectly. We have certainly not lost faith in Toronado. Clearly, he did not show anything like his true form at Newmarket--we know that from his work at home with Van der Neer and we hope that we might have found the reason and that he will bounce back in style." Hannon Jr also announced that Ben Keswick's G1 1,000 Guineas heroine Sky Lantern (Ire) (Red Clubs {Ire}) will join Toronado at the Royal meeting and contest the June 21 G1 Coronation S., with Ahmad Alkhalafi's Maureen (Ire) (Holy Roman Emperor {Ire}), who was a close-up sixth behind her at Newmarket, being aimed at the G1 Irish 1,000 Guineas at The Curragh May 26. "Sky Lantern has come out of Newmarket better than we could have hoped," he added. "She gave us a day that none of us will ever forget when winning the 1,000 Guineas and now we look to top up the celebrations in the Coronation S. at Royal Ascot, where we will again cross swords with runner-up Just the Judge. Maureen also delighted us at Newmarket, finishing better than anything, and now we know that she gets the mile well we have more options available, and the Irish 1,000 Guineas is very much the next port of call."

RACETRACK ROUND-UP

GROUPIE DOLL RETURNS TO TRACK

Last year's champion female sprinter Groupie Doll (Bowman's Band), who capped off 2012 with a win in the Nov. 3 GI Breeders' Cup Filly & Mare Sprint and a runner-up finish in the Nov. 24 GI Cigar Mile, returned to Churchill Downs Monday after a three-month stint at Indian Ridge Farm in Frankfort. Trainer Buff Bradley, who owns Groupie Doll in partnership with his father Fred, Carl Hurst and Brent Burns, sent the 5-year-old home in early February after she was not training to his satisfaction at Gulfstream Park. "Is it a 180-degree turnaround from Florida?--Absolutely," said Bradley.

"She has really good energy and she wants to do it. I knew we were good and did not anticipate any problems bringing her back." During her time off, the chestnut shared a pasture with a former star from the Badley barn, 12-year-old MGSW Brass Hat (Prized). "Brass" was training her," Bradley said of the previous stable star who earned more than $2.1 million in his career. "They would run for 10 minutes and Brass was so smart, he would cut the corner on her and when they were done, she was really blowing." Bradley indicated he will jog Groupie Doll through the remainder of the month before beginning galloping the mare in June.

WAR ON DRUGS? VET RECORDS AND STATE RULES SAY NO

Part II of A PAINFUL TRUTH: A six-part series on medication and the reform movement in U.S. racing

By Ryan Goldberg

Stables migrating from New York to Florida in the late fall and returning in the spring is as familiar as the birds which trail them. But besides the weather, the horses in those stables, on arrival and then departure, must get accustomed to changes in their drug routine, as important as any decision a trainer will make nowadays.

This is what the stables had grown used to in the Sunshine State. Corticosteroids, such as betamethasone (Celestone) and triamcinolone acetonide (Vetalog), can be administered 24 hours before a race, with the unique exception of prednisolone sodium succinate, which is allowed, like furosemide (Lasix), four hours before post. The 24-hour threshold also goes for a host of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) – flunixin, ketoprofen, phenylbutazone. Clenbuterol, the popular bronchodilator beloved for its anabolic effects, reportedly has a five-day withdrawal time. The analgesic butorphanol is also reportedly permitted until three days before a race, the sedative acepromazine at four days, the pain-killer lidocaine at seven. The state doesn't regulate total carbon dioxide (TCO₂), the byproduct of milkshaking (a solution of sodium bicarbonate administered to racehorses by stomach tube 4 to 6 hours before racing to counteract the accumulation of lactic acid in the muscles), ceding this responsibility to its racetracks. Tampa Bay Downs, for example, claims to test all graded-stakes runners and randomly in other races.

Arriving in New York only weeks ago, the same trainers found different standards: five-day withdrawal periods for corticosteroids when administered systemically and seven days when injected in the joints. Like most states, Florida evidently doesn't make a distinction. Flunixin is allowed until 24 hours before a race, ketoprofen and phenylbutazone until 48 hours. Clenbuterol cannot be used within 14 days. Butorphanol and acepromazine and lidocaine are permitted until four days. The state calls a positive on TCO₂ levels above 37 millimoles per liter.

Something as standard as who administers Lasix differs: private veterinarians in Florida versus state veterinarians in New York. Even the drug tests are dissimilar. To test for several of the more common corticosteroids and a select number of NSAIDs – all Class 4 and 5 substances – Florida employs thin-layer chromatography (TLC), a fast and inexpensive method which, according to expert opinion, has been outdated since the 1980s and utilized by few other states. The state legislature determines this.

“That testing is not sensitive at all,” says Dr. Mary Scollay, the equine medical director of the Kentucky Horse Racing Commission, who previously spent 13 years in Florida racing. “There is a general knowledge that going to Florida in the winter, a trainer will have more options to race on medication than he would in his home state.”

The differences between the two states are made greater because of recent changes in New York in response to the task force on the 2011-12 fatalities at Aqueduct (the New York Task Force on Racehorse Health and Safety). It extended its withdrawal time for clenbuterol from four to 14 days, systemic use of corticosteroids from 48 hours to five days and their intra-articular administration from five to seven days. The withdrawal time for methylprednisolone acetate, a popular corticosteroid, but potentially degradative to the joint capsule, sold as DepoMedrol, was extended to 15 days.

The value of the task force’s report cannot be overstated. Like a time capsule, it pulls back the veil on racing as it currently operates, portraying its profound dependence on permissible drugs. Scollay was one of its authors, along with Jerry Bailey, Scott Palmer and Alan M. Foreman.

What happened when New York reformed its medication rules? Shippers disappeared, its average field size dropped, and Aqueduct cut six mid-week days. One could not have dreamed up a better summary of the need for uniform, not to mention tougher, drug regulations.

The comparison between Florida and New York is only one example; every state offers a dizzying assortment of drugs for trainers, by way of their veterinarians, to choose from. As far as withdrawal times and thresholds – not to mention penalties for exceeding them – no two states are alike.

Not even neighbors, like Texas and Louisiana, which share horses and horsemen and where the most common drugs are treated differently. Texas permits only furosemide on the day of the race, whereas Louisiana reportedly allows up to five adjunct bleeder medications. The same for bute. Louisiana allows 5 milligrams the day before – though 2 milligrams for graded stakes – but Texas sticks with the lower administration of 2 milligrams for all races. And following new Racing Medication and Testing Consortium (RMTC) guidelines, Texas recently extended its withdrawal time for clenbuterol to 14 days and intra-articular injections of corticosteroids to seven days, plus 21 for DepoMedrol.

Louisiana, without identifying which drugs, authorizes the “full use of modern therapeutic measures for the improvement and protection of the health of a horse,” except on the day of the race. This 24-hour anything-goes rule is unique. In racing parlance, Louisiana is called a horsemen-friendly state.

“I have serious questions about it, to be honest,” says Dr. Ken Quirk, the Texas Racing Commission’s equine medical director, who fears his state will lose even more horses to Louisiana as a result.

These disparities raise a question at the heart of permissive medication and American racing: If all of these drugs are classified as therapeutic, their purpose presumably based on science, then how could separate racing jurisdictions approach them so differently?

It seems a trainer would have to be crazy to use illegal drugs when so many legal ones are at his disposal. Before the days of pharmacological drugs, the goal was to “hop ‘em or stop ‘em,” but what the picture looks like now is an everyday practice of using drugs to manage pain and other complications to get a horse to post. Since the majority of horses race for tags, it makes sense. “The claiming game does not protect the horse,” Scollay says. “It’s like day-trading on the stock market.”

From 2005 through 2011, there were 3,497 post-race medication rulings, not including furosemide, collected from 32 states by The Jockey Club. Of this total, 2,006 were for drugs related to pain management and another 216 for corticosteroids.

Medical records for the horses who died at Aqueduct elevate to life these cruel statistics. You see nearly every trainer push right up against the withdrawal time for a variety of drugs, stacking similar NSAIDs and corticosteroids, searching for combinations which might prove more effective than the parts. The RMTC recently proposed rules against “stacking” NSAIDs, but at present few states have them.

“It’s not uncommon for a racehorse in a lot of jurisdictions, not just Texas,” Quirk says, “to receive flunixin at 36 or 24 hours before the race, maybe even ketoprofen at the same time, and the day before two milligrams of bute and then also dexamethasone phosphate, which is a corticosteroid. I have an issue with that. If you have all those on board, how does that impact the pre-race inspection process?”

This greatly concerned the authors of the Aqueduct report. Seven of the 21 fatalities had received intra-articular injections of corticosteroids near the race, but their trainers didn’t

No history of lameness prior to injury. Coronado Heights was in a regular training routine.

Coronado Heights's career spanned just six weeks and three races, but during the last 25 days of his life, he received 24 separate intravenous, intra-muscular or intra-articular injections, of 9 different drugs, plus vitamins and electrolytes post-race, presumably to counteract the effects of Lasix. He was given that regimen of medications despite the fact that his veterinarian said he had no history of lameness, and his trainer said the breakdown was a complete shock to him.

report this to the stewards, a rule that was never enforced. Coronado Heights, a name which never leaves the mind once you hear his story, was one of those horses.

The four-year-old bay gelding could never match his well-regarded pedigree, by Pulpit out of the Coronado's Quest mare Coronado Rose. He began his career for a $12,500 tag on Jan. 12, 2012, and won that day, but two starts and six weeks later, on Feb. 25, he broke down on the track.

The following was his pre-race regimen. Five days before his final race, he was treated for inflammation of the medial stifle joints. He was sedated intravenously with xylazine and dormosedan, his joints injected with 80 mg of DepoMedrol and 5 cc hyaluronic acid – the first to decrease inflammation and the other to prevent it – and given 5 mg of flunixin. Three days later, he got an assortment of NSAIDs intravenously – two mg of bute, five more mg of flunixin, and Legend, pure hyaluronic acid – and injected intra-muscularly with Estrone and joint treatment

Adequan. The next day, Feb. 24, two more mg of bute, and Vitamin B1 and calcium. According to the death certificate, Michael McCarthy, overseeing Coronado Heights for trainer Todd Pletcher, said the breakdown was a complete shock to him and that the horse had no soundness issues. Either this was a cruel joke or this battery of drugs was standard practice.

Nothing about this was prohibited, although injecting DepoMedrol so close to the race is now forbidden in New York. Coronado Heights wouldn't have failed a drug test, since each was prescribed according to its individual threshold. There are no rules in New York against stacking similar-working drugs.

When tests are blown, it is the cost of doing business. For instance, no trainer in America has had more reported drug positives than Kirk Ziadie, according to public records, yet Ziadie once again leads the Calder standings as he has for much of his 12-year career. His horses have earned about $11 million in purses, while on 41 occasions they've failed drug tests, tests which are widely seen as insensitive anyway. Despite this record, Ziadie was only fined a total of $13,100 – not even the winner's share of one race – and his horses never disqualified of purse money. When Florida's Division of Pari-Mutuel Wagering finally tried suspending Ziadie for two months, he appealed the case for two years.

Even something as severe as the findings of dermorphin, the extremely powerful painkiller derived from South American frog secretion, doesn't mean an automatic ban. Though Quarter horse racetracks in Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and California have used their private-property rights to exclude trainers for Class 1 violations, in Louisiana, seven of the eight frog-juice trainers have obtained stays of their suspensions – Alvin Smith Jr. (suspended 10 years); John Darrel Soileau (10 years); Alonzo Loya (five years); Kyi Lormand (three years); Anthony Agilar (six years); and Gonzalo Gonzales (three years). In the meantime, they keep winning races.

As far as their everyday use on the track, corticosteroids have become a new front in medication reform. Though states like New York, Texas and Minnesota have restricted its use close to the race, most states seem stuck at the 48-hour threshold, or even 24 hours. Which means a horse can be injected, dangerously in the joints, after it passes the entry box.

The medical opinion on corticosteroids is that they are highly potent, especially when injected intra-articularly, and successfully quiet joint inflammation and thereby reduce pain and lameness. Their relief is often temporary, however, and when used close to exercise can prove deleterious. You can only “tap” a horse so many times, too, before finding diminishing returns.

And not all corticosteroids are created equal, claims Dr. Wayne McIlwraith, Director of the Orthopaedic Research Center at Colorado State University, who has studied them intensely. “DepoMedrol is bad; the others are good. That's the bottom line,” McIlwraith said at the Welfare and Safety of the Racehorse Summit IV held last October at Keeneland.

Because the drugs are long-acting and, depending on their administration, may stay in the bloodstream for several weeks or more, regulation is challenging. Blood tests cannot indicate how or when they were administered, says Texas's Quirk. Until recently, states rarely tested for it; through the '60s and '70s, they prostration. However, no other states in sunny climates allow it. Short-acting, it supposedly treats animals on the verge of shock. “As an effort to stave off heat prostration I think it is a real stretch,” says Quirk, himself familiar with sweltering Texas days. Several Northeast trainers who race in Florida during the winter have confided that they believe this practice crazy.

As powerful as they are, McIlwraith said that corticosteroids can easily be pushed out to 14 days – a great distance from the common 48-hour rule. “There needs to be a point where therapy ends and competition begins,” he said pointedly. “That is part of the dilemma we have.”

Repetitive use, McIlwraith found, particularly of DepoMedrol, can cause significant damage to the cartilage in the joint. Out-of-competition regulation, the Aqueduct report concluded, is desperately needed. Horses passing through the claiming ranks are bound to receive redundant, and thus dangerous, treatment. Like Almighty Silver, who made 44 starts for earnings of $372,215 and was claimed three times in the three months leading up to his final race at Aqueduct, each claim making his medical record, which didn’t transfer with change in trainers, increasingly problematic. He received four intra-articular injections five days prior to his fatal breakdown on March 4, 2012. Not enough time had passed to assess were legal on the day of the race. Minnesota was one of the first to change. Only with the newest testing method – liquid chromatography–mass spectrometry (LC-MS) – can it be detected at minute amounts, says Dr. Jill Hovda, the equine medical director there. Older techniques are bound to miss them; for this reason, Florida, which uses the antiquated TLC method, has never called a positive since at least 2005.

In Florida, the use of prednisolone sodium succinate on race-day is a relic of that older time. Kent Stirling, the head of its horsemen’s group, has argued that it prevents heat his response to that treatment, the report concluded.

“Trainers were quite frank to say they would claim a horse and inject it with corticosteroids to get it out there and get claimed,” Scollay says. “And this is not only in New York.”

She added: “The industry as a whole needs to contemplate what we learned from New York.”

What else did they learn? That nothing epitomizes racing’s drug problems better than clenbuterol, which goes by the trade name Ventipulmin and treats lower airway inflammation and upper respiratory infections, but also builds muscle mass. Scollay and her colleagues found that clenbuterol was being used beyond its labeled therapeutic purposes and was as regular as feed time.

Clenbuterol arrived on the backstretch around 30 years ago; the late veterinarian Alex Harthill was one of the first to import it, from Europe, and prescribe it here. It did not gain F.D.A. approval until 1998, and thus went undetected in the afternoons for almost two decades. Once a test came out, it quickly surfaced in post-race samples, especially in California, where six trainers, including Darrell Vienna, Bruce Headley, and Vladimir Cerin, had horses test positive. Ted West, the trainer of Budroyale, had eight different horses fail tests. California officials decided to allow it, with minor restrictions, and for much of the next 10 years, there and elsewhere, its withdrawal time was on the order of a few days to a week.

When anabolic steroids were banned in 2010, clenbuterol became even more popular. “I use a lot of clenbuterol in horses,” Scott Lake, who has led the nation in wins several times, said that year in a television interview. The number of positives support this trend: from 2005 through 2012, 61 percent of the total occurred in the last three years of that period, according to public records from 23 states.

In 2011, California found the drug in 54 percent of horses. “Clenbuterol is one of the worst things that happened to racing,” Hall of Fame trainer Jack Van Berg told a forum on drug use last year.

For its Aqueduct investigation, Scollay says, “We asked trainers, ‘Do you have a regular training program?’ All of them said no. And then we asked them, ‘Do you use clenbuterol?’ ‘Yes, we do and we

For its Aqueduct investigation, Scollay says, “We asked trainers, ‘Do you have a regular training program?’ All of them said no. better – effects of anabolic steroids, Scollay says, not airway medication. “We gave them the opportunity to say we need it to maintain airway health. ‘The barns are dusty,’ things like that...You could’ve given them that. But no, they all described the anabolic effects.”

Its manufacturer, Boehringer Ingelheim, says clenbuterol should be withdrawn 30 days before a race, and the American Quarter Horse Association now follows that guideline. New Mexico recently banned it going on a second year.

Clenbuterol clears the system slowly in urine but quickly in blood, usually gone within 96 hours in the latter. Its anabolic effects remain. It takes approximately 30 days to clear urine. Most states still test blood, Scollay says, but the only way to legitimately prohibit its use is by testing urine; with a 72-hour withdrawal time, for example, a blood test cannot distinguish between a trainer who used clenbuterol every day for a month up to that threshold, or for five days.

Despite this, clenbuterol is treated differently from state to state, according to a survey of state racing commissions and state veterinarians – anywhere from a 24-hour withdrawal (Louisiana and Oklahoma) to 14 days (New York, Texas, Maryland) or 21 days (Arizona, California) or 30 days (Oregon, New Mexico). The rest, however, fall under a week, and some, like Arkansas, Kansas, Nebraska and Massachusetts offer no guideline. The racing commissions of Florida, at five days, and Illinois, at seven days, declare a zero-tolerance policy, whatever that means. Kentucky and Pennsylvania and Canada are at three days, New Jersey and Iowa and Ohio at four days, and Delaware and West Virginia and Michigan at a week.

Looking at clenbuterol rulings from 2005 through 2012, which can be incomplete, one finds almost no interstate or even intrastate rhyme or reason in how rule-breaking is handled. Some states always take away the purse, others do not. Some states hand out penalties of a few hundred dollars, others a few thousand.

The number of positives per state could depend on many things. Take Pennsylvania, which led all states with 66. Does that mean it has greater clenbuterol abuse or more enforcement? Does it employ more sensitive tests? Do their penalties affect recidivism? In every instance, Pennsylvania took away the purse.

Ohio had 18 positives, all of which merited disqualifications. Its fines were $250 or $500, although it handed out suspensions of 15 or 30 days. Illinois, a “zero-tolerance” state, levied fines of $1,000 or $1,500 but only one suspension. California, which had 51 positives and disqualified the horse all but 10 times, seemed to offer a ladder of penalties from no fine for a first offense, to $1,000, to $3,000, and up to $10,000 and $15,000. Other states rarely fine a trainer more than $1,000. In 2011, one California offender earned a $7,500 fine and a 90-day suspension.

Kentucky had only six reported positives, which seems low compared to other major states. It only disqualified the winner on three occasions, assigned 15- or 30-day suspensions, and didn’t levy a fine but once.

Florida, with its “zero-tolerance” approach, had 34 reported positives. Not a single one merited a disqualification, and only once a suspension. Most fines were like traffic tickets – either $250 or $300 – with the recent average at $500. Only three times did a fine reach $1,000.

“If one were inclined to race on clenbuterol, then why not race in Florida?” asks Scollay. “It’s the cost of doing business. Two-hundred dollars is not a bad investment.”

Clenbuterol is classified as a class 3 drug, but Florida’s penalties for more serious offenses – the first two classes of drugs – are softer than other major racing jurisdictions. So the sunshine isn’t the only attraction.

For the Jockeys’ Guild last January, officials of The Jockey Club revealed statistics on medication rulings it had collected. They found that 15 percent of trainers licensed between 2005 and 2011 had drug rulings during that time. Excluding those with two or three rulings separated by years, 1.5 percent – approximately 200 trainers – accounted for a third of all drug rulings. In their words, this small group was shaping public perception of racing.

Using publicly available documents, the Thoroughbred Daily News learned the identities of these trainers. They are familiar names. The top three had the majority of their violations in Florida.

From 2005 through 2011, Kirk Ziadie led all trainers with 33 reported positives. Then came Dale Bennett, who races in Tampa in the winter and Chicago the rest of the year, with 25. Marty Wolfson, a Breeders’ Cup winner, completed the trifecta with 21. They were followed by Jamie Ness, the nation’s leading trainer by wins (15 violations); Edward Clouston (all 13 in West Virginia); Jason Wise (all 12 in Nebraska);

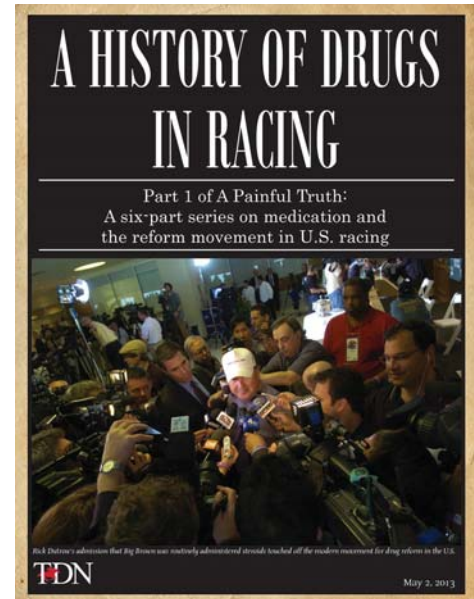

Rick Dutrow (12, seven of those in Florida); Jerry Hollendorfer (all 11 in California); Troy Bethke (all 11 in Minnesota); and Scooter Davis (nine of 10 in West Virginia).

Some conclusions can be drawn. None of the individuals were scared away by their racing commissions during this time, as their rule-breaking was concentrated in one state. Only later did Dutrow get slapped with a 10-year suspension and Davis booted from Charles Town for using a program trainer while serving a six-month drug suspension. Bethke has not entered a horse since September. The other trainers are still in business.

The most obvious conclusion, especially after expanding the picture to the 50 most-penalized trainers, is alarming: the correlation between leading in drug violations and leading in wins and training titles. These trainers enjoy unbridled success at their home tracks. It is a truth of American racing that falls with the weight of an anvil.

CALDER, HORSEMEN REACH TEMPORARY AGREEMENT Calder Race Course confirmed Thursday that a temporary agreement has been struck with the Florida horsemen which extends the purse contract through June 2, according to published reports. The agreement consequently allows the Miami track to distribute its signal at out-of-state simulcast sites and account wagering operations. Effective May 9, Calder will restoring average daily overnight purses to approximately $180,000, the level prior to the four-day signal cutoff that began May 2. Calder had cut overnight purses 20% in anticipation of reduced pari-mutuel handle. Owned by Churchill Downs, Calder has been without a contract with the local horsemen since May 3 and the new agreement grants the parties an extended period of three weeks to strike to a long-term deal. The long-term deal has been hampered by the dispute between Calder, which has issued a ban on horses from returning to the track if it competes at an outside establishment, and Gulfstream Park for racing dates in Southern Florida. The two tracks are set to race concurrently, beginning July 1.

A half-step slow to begin, Borel rode aggressively in the first few strides and had his filly at the head of affairs by the time they reached the bend. Always comfortable up front, the homebred kicked away in upper stretch and was kept to her task in the final 100 yards to score by a handy 5 1/4 lengths. Deliver (Article of Faith) completed the exacta as the second-longest shot on the board. The winner's dam, guided by Borel to a debut victory going five furlongs of this main track in 2001, went on to win the Spring Fever S. as a 4-year-old and retired with seven wins from her 19 trips to the post. Increased "Ship and Win" Returns to Del Mar in '13:

Del Mar's "Ship and Win" program will return for its third year at the oceanside oval's 2013 meeting. The program rewards owners with a $1,000 direct payment, as well as purse boosts, for horse's shipped in to race for the first time at the track. In 2013, the purse bonus will be 33 1/3% for new starters, up from 25% in 2011 and 20% in 2011.

"At the racetrack, they'll tell you to stick with a winner," said Del Mar Thoroughbred Club's executive vice president for racing Tom Robbins. "And this simple plan has been an absolute winner. Through it, we not only are encouraging owners and trainers from around North America to consider running with us this summer, we're prodding our local owners and trainers to use their sources and resources to bring new faces into the mix."

Since implementing the "Ship and Win" program, Del Mar has seen an increase in starters. The average field size in 2010 was 8.2; in 2011, the number was up to 8.4 and in 2012 it rose to 8.7. Other California tracks also enjoyed benefits from the program, with Del Mar's 137 "Ship and Win" horses last year making an additional 318 starts at other race meetings in the state through the end of 2012.

"A program like this does nothing but good for all our racetracks," said Mike Pegram, chairman of the board of directors of the Thoroughbred Owners of California. "We're happy to partner with Del Mar on it once again and have high hopes that it will prove even more successful in its third go-round."

Tres Blue was highly tried in his second go, running ninth in Germany's prestigious G3 Preis des Winterfavoriten at Dusseldorf Oct. 14, and closed his juvenile campaign with a breakthrough score at Chantilly Nov. 6. Sixth in the Mar. 16 Listed Prix Maurice Caillault on seasonal return, he was allowed off at double-digit odds here returning from a conditions fifth back at Chantilly Apr. 10. The homebred bay stalked a modest pace in fourth for much of this stamina test. Stoked up soon after turning for home, he moved into second entering the final eighth and stayed on resolutely under a continued drive to oust Garrogorille in the dying strides for a career high.

SAVABEEL COLT TOPS NZB WEANLING SALE

The weanling section of New Zealand Bloodstock's National Weanling, Broodmare, and Mixed Bloodstock Sale concluded yesterday, with a son of Savabeel (Aus) (Zabeel {NZ}) bringing the top price of NZ$115,000 (US$97,118). Catalogued as lot 304, the dark bay was purchased by Bruce and Maureen Harvey of Ascot Stud from the draft of Curraghmore Stud.

Session-topping Lot 304
nzb.co.nz

"He's a lovely horse," said Bruce Harvey. "He's a lovely color, a very athletic individual, and he was well sought after in the ring as we were pushed to get him. Curraghmore Stud do a great job with their draft--their horses are always well prepared and he looked great in the ring. All going well he will come back for the yearling sales."

Ascot and Curraghmore Studs finished the weanling portion of the sale as the leading buyer and vendor, respectively. Ascot Stud purchased eight weanlings for a total of $404,500, all with the goal of re-selling as yearlings. It was the eighth consecutive leading vendor title for Gordon Cunningham's Curraghmore Stud, which provided four the top six lots.

"This has always been an important sale for Curraghmore and our clients," Cunningham said. "I can only speak for ourselves, but our good colts were busy and in strong demand, and in the current climate it was good to be able to sell our fillies at reasonable prices too." Savabeel emerged the leading sire of weanlings sold, while first season sires Makfi (GB) (Dubawi {Ire}) and Shocking (Aus) (Street Cry {Ire}) also made strong showings.

The weanling sale concluded with 234 lots sold for NZ$2,540,650, for a clearance rate of 77% to match last year's figure. The median was up 25% from last year's figure to NZ$5,000, and the average was down 9% to $NZ10,857.

Curraghmore also made a splash during the first session of the mixed portion of the sale, which began upon the conclusion of the weanlings. Curraghmore went to NZ$80,000 (US$67,560) to secure Prestigious Miss (Aus) (Written Tycoon {Aus}--Mathematical {NZ}, by Honor Grades), a 5-year-old Group 2-placed mare offered as a horse in training. She went through the ring as lot 371 from the draft of Oxford Thoroughbreds.

"She's a lovely, quality mare with good performance, and I thought she was great value," Cunningham said. "She's going to visit Pierro in the spring."

In total, the second session of the sale saw 58 of 81 catalogued sell for NZ$277,950, resulting in a clearance rate of 72%, and an average of NZ$4,792, for a total turnover of NZ$2,819,750 over the first two days of the sale. The sale's third and final session begins tomorrow at 10 a.m. local time, and can be viewed live at www.nzb.co.nz.

LUCKY CHAPPY TO RACE IN AUSTRALIA

Team Valor International's Lucky Chappy (Ire) (High Chaparral {Ire}) has been shipped to Australia where he will continue his racing career, according to Team Valor Chief Executive Officer Barry Irwin. A two-time winner in Italy as a juvenile, Lucky Chappy has been graded-placed five times since arriving in the U.S. in October 2011, with his most notable finish being a third-place effort in last November's GI Hollywood Derby.

Irwin noted that there were a number of factors involved in the decision to send the 4-year-old to Australia, and the performance of his sire down under was a notable consideration. A dual-hemisphere shuttler for Coolmore, High Chaparral has sired six Group 1 winners in Australia.

"His sire knocks 'em dead down there," Irwin explained. "That's where he does his best, although he's doing pretty good in Europe this year, too."

Irwin noted that Lucky Chappy looks like he wants 1 1/2-miles or more, leaving his options in America limited.

"I'm intrigued by the Melbourne Cup," Irwin said. "I think this horse fits the profile of a horse that could get in that race, not this coming year, but maybe the year after. I think if this horse were there, had enough races and matured, he could develop into a Melbourne Cup-type horse."

Irwin said having a horse race in Australia will help him learn more about that industry.

"That race intrigues me, as does racing down there, and since we're going to have Animal Kingdom stand down there [at Arrowfield Stud], it behooves me to learn more about it and get more involved in the racing down there," he said.

In his only two racetrack appearances this season, Lucky Chappy finished seventh in the GII Mac Diarmida S. at Gulfstream Feb. 16 and fifth in allowance company Mar. 2. Irwin noted that the bay was recently found to have bone bruising that required a brief period of rest, but that he would be able to return to training upon arriving in Australia. Lucky Chappy will join trainer Pat Carey. "He seems to be the kind of guy I want," Irwin explained. "He only trains about 30 horses. I went to his place, visited him, and watched him do his thing. He's the kind of guy that will be able to give individual attention to my horse, and he's a specialist with stayers."
