

FABRE SCORES A PERFECT TEN

Already successful a record nine times in the G2 Prix Guillaume d'Ornano, Andre Fabre continued his domination with a one-two led home by the highly progressive Vancouverite (GB) (Dansili {GB}) and jockey Pierre-Charles Boudot. Emerging from a conditions score at Chateaubriant Apr. 19 to contest a better race at Longchamp July 6, the bay upset his favored barnmate and subsequent winner Penglai Pavilion (Monsun {Ger}) in that 10-furlong contest and built on that when taking the Listed Prix Pelleas in style again over this trip at Compiègne last time July 22. Breaking well to race in third off the generous early tempo, he challenged between the ultimately disappointing market leaders Morandi (Fr) (Holy Roman Emperor {Ire}) and Havana Gold (Ire) (Teofilo {Ire}) to seize the advantage passing the furlong marker. Pushed out from there, he had already sealed the result by the time stable companion Pilote (Ire) (Pivotal {GB}) was able to make an impact. "He's a really nice colt who quickened very well there, so we'll have to see what to do," Godolphin's Racing Manager Simon Crisford commented. "He would have to be supplemented for the G1 Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe [at Longchamp Oct. 6], but that is a race that will be under consideration. We'll wait for now and see how he does."

Andre Fabre Racing Post

GOFFS ANNOUNCES NEW SALE

Goffs has announced that it will stage for the first time next year its new London Sale for 2-year-olds and horses-in-training on the eve of Royal Ascot. The Goffs London Sale, set for June 16, 2014 at Kempton Racecourse, will be promoted globally to the international group that will attend Royal Ascot. Goffs will organize dedicated luxury travel for buyers to and from the sale. The day will begin with the 2-year-olds breezing over Kempton's Polytrack, followed by a champagne reception before the sale gets underway over lunch in Kempton's Panoramic Restaurant. "Many have talked of a London Sale in recent times, and here it is," said Goffs Chief Executive Officer Henry Beeby. "Goffs London Sale will focus on true quality on the eve of the most prestigious race meeting of the year. A select number of Classically bred 2-year-olds alongside a concise selection of highly rated horses in training, some of which may hold an entry at the Royal Meeting, will start Royal Ascot week off in some style. Indeed, this is a sale that, like the Royal Meeting, will truly be about quality rather than quantity, and I guarantee that we will put on some show." The idea has already received support from some key members of the Irish industry. Willie Browne of Mocklershill Stud, a leading breeze-up vendor, said: "I'm up for it, as this makes real sense. A later sale for a quality breeze-up horse that benefits from time can only be good, and for it to be in London the day before the Royal Meeting will be terrific." Pat Downes, Manager to the Aga Khan in Ireland, added: "Having an outlet for quality form horses at a time when so many domestic and international buyers are in one place is a superb idea."

Ireland to Host Champions Weekend

Horse Racing Ireland recently announced that it will stage for the first time next year an Irish Champions weekend, an end-of-season festival of racing created in the mold of Britain's Champions Day. "I suppose we're taking a leaf out of the British book and the success of their Champions Day, but just as importantly, we're creating a scope for a wonderful end of European season series between Ireland, France and Britain, where you can have 18 Group 1 races between those three meetings over all the major categories and distances," Brian Kavanagh, Chief Executive Officer of HRI, said.

Golden Soul Works for Travers

Charles Fipke's Golden Soul (Perfect Soul {Ire}), runner-up in the GI Kentucky Derby, tuned up for Saratoga's GI Travers S. with a five-furlong bullet in 1:01.40 over the Oklahoma training track yesterday. "I know he's good enough to win it if we have him ready," trainer Dallas Stewart said. "You can't go in there half trained up. You've got to cowboy up and train this son of a gun, and the horse has to prove it to you."

PERFECT RECORD STAYS INTACT

Making an instant impact when taking a seven-furlong maiden by 10 lengths at Newcastle June 28, Zibelina transferred that style into substance when taking Ascot's Listed Valiant S. over this trip July 26, and emerged from this competitive affair with her unbeaten record still in place and her reputation enhanced. Breaking best to lead for a few strides, the bay was reined back to race keenly in a wide fourth by Mickael Barzalona, but was in prime position in mid-stretch and was committed on the front end approaching the furlong pole. Despite the late effort of Table Ronde, she was beyond recall and toughed it out to the line as Siyenica closed from too far off the pace. "She is a lovely filly and we thought she had a nice chance," Godolphin's Racing Manager Simon Crisford commented. "She is a strong possible for the G1 Sun Chariot S. [at Newmarket Sept. 28]."

Afsare first rose to prominence when taking the Listed Hampton Court S. over 10 furlongs at Royal Ascot in 2010, and had been kept mainly at that trip subsequently, with his first taste of the top level coming in the G1 Premio Presidente della Repubblica at the Capannelle last May. Runner-up to Crackerjack King (Ire) (Shamardal) there, the bay took the Listed Gala S. at Sandown July 6 before finishing second again in the G2 York S. in July. In that spot once more behind Little Mike (Spanish Steps) in the G1 Arlington Million, he was next spotted finishing down the field after a 10-month absence in the June 19 G1 Prince of Wales's S. at Royal Ascot. Runner-up in the Gala S. back at Sandown last time July 5, he successfully reverted to a mile for the first time since his early 3-year-old days and put in a dazzling performance to suggest this is the trip he should stay at. Always traveling easily in behind the leading trio, he tanked to the lead with 1 1/2 furlongs remaining and skipped clear under minimal urging. "It was like a piece of work," jockey Andrea Atzeni commented. "He's always been a good horse and travels for fun. He's a very straightforward horse and quickened really well."

This race was robbed of most of its interest by the withdrawal of Darwin (Big Brown) due to the rain changing the ground to good, and what looked like a subsequent soft touch for Gordon Lord Byron almost turned into a flop as he made heavy weather of the task in hand. Brushed aside by Ballydoyle's absentee in the G3 Minstrel S. at The Curragh July 20, last year's G1 Prix de la Foret scorer had gone on to chase home Europe's elite sprinters Moonlight Cloud (GB) (Invincible Spirit {Ire}) and Lethal Force (Ire) (Dark Angel {Ire}) in the G1 Prix Maurice de Gheest at Deauville Aug. 4. Possibly feeling the effects of that recent ordeal, the bay took until the final 20 yards to get to the outsider Ansgar, having made much less than his usual fluent progress from rear during the two-furlong stretch.

NEWS TODAY

IRELAND TO HOST CHAMPIONS WEEKEND

Horse Racing Ireland recently announced that it will stage for the first time next year an Irish Champions weekend, an end-of-season festival of racing created in the mold of Britain's Champions Day.

The event will take place over two days--Saturday, Sept. 13 and Sunday, Sept. 14--at Ireland's two flagship racecourses: Leopardstown, near Dublin, and The Curragh in County Kildare. It will host a minimum of 10 group races, including five Group 1s, as well as a number of valuable handicaps.

Brian Kavanagh
Racing Post

Brian Kavanagh, Chief Executive Officer of HRI, noted that the Irish Champions Weekend will be built on the same standards as its counterparts in Britain and France (G1 Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe weekend), and he said he sees the potential for the three events to combine marketing strategies to create a championship series.

"I suppose we're taking a leaf out of the British book and the success of their Champions Day, but just as importantly, we're creating a scope for a wonderful end of European season series between Ireland, France and Britain, where you can have 18 Group 1 races between those three meetings over all the major categories and distances," Kavanagh said. "It creates plenty of potential to develop this into a series of championships, Triple Crowns and things like that."

Kavanagh noted that the Irish Champions Weekend has been strategically placed three weeks before France's Arc meeting, which is two weeks before British Champions Day, which is in turn three weeks before the Breeders' Cup.

"We've started the process of engaging with the French and British authorities, but I think that will be phase two of this," he noted. "The first thing is to establish the meeting and make it a success."

Kavanagh noted that the two-day meeting will be largely composed of existing top-level races that will be brought together to create a blockbuster weekend. Highlights will include the G1 Irish Champion S. and G1 Matron S. for older horses and the G1 National S. and G1 Moyglare Stud S. for 2-year-old colts and fillies, respectively. Some of the finer details, including purse structure and sponsorship, have not yet been finalized.

In addition to providing a solid ending to the Irish flat season, Kavanagh noted that the Irish Champions Weekend will also provide an opportunity to showcase Irish racing and breeding to the world.

"We want to make this a weekend in which the bloodstock world is focused on Ireland," he said. "So we'll be talking to all the organizations within the industry about how best to showcase Ireland. We're looking to the sales companies to consider having a sale around this weekend, we're looking to Irish Thoroughbred Marketing to encourage overseas visitors to come over, and we like the idea of having government involvement with a gala dinner over the weekend."

Kavanagh said that he also sees potential for future collaboration with the Breeders' Cup.

"I think the potential for links with the Breeders' Cup is strong," he said. "I think that's the way things are going around the world--there's more focus on these big marquee meetings." --Kelsey Riley

RACETRACK ROUND-UP

International Takes Shape...

Wednesday's G1 Juddmonte International at York looks set to draw a small field after nine remained at yesterday's six-day stage. Trainer Roger Charlton is looking forward to saddling John Deer's triple Group 1 winner Al Kazeem (GB) (Dubawi {Ire}). "He's had a nice break and he's favorite for a hugely valuable race over a distance that he's been winning over," Charlton told the Guardian. There's a chance that the ground might have a bit more cut in it than he's been used to recently, which will be to his advantage." Connections of the July 31 G1 Sussex S. winner Toronado (Ire) (High Chaparral {Ire}) appear to be leaning towards running, with Richard Hannon, Jr. saying yesterday, "He is in very good form and the chances are we might go there, but we won't make a decision yet. We are very happy with the horse." Aidan O'Brien has left in Camelot (GB) (Montjeu {Ire}), Declaration of War (War Front), Ruler of the World (Ire) (Galileo {Ire}) and Kingsbarns (Ire) (Galileo {Ire}), with the latter more likely to contest the G2 Great Voltigeur S. on the same card. Jim Bolger and Sir Michael Stoute have left in the July 27 G1 King George VI and Queen Elizabeth S. second and third Trading Leather (Ire) (Teofilo {Ire}) and Hillstar (GB) (Danehill Dancer {Ire}), respectively. "He's very well and fairly hardy, so I think he will be well up to it," Bolger said of Trading Leather. "He's possibly the best staying 3-year-old around."

'Approach' Back For Champions' Day...

Trainer Jim Bolger is hopeful that Dawn Approach (Ire) (New Approach {Ire}) will be ready for the G1 Queen Elizabeth II S. at Ascot on QIPCO Champions Day. Godolphin's G1 2000 Guineas and G1 St James's Palace S. hero returned a dirty scope when fifth in Sunday's G1 Prix Jacques le Marois at Deauville, but is expected to make a quick recovery. "His scope wasn't good and he's a bit under the weather, which has been well publicized, but he should be all right in about two weeks," Bolger said. "We should have plenty of time to get him ready for October and the QEII is most definitely on the agenda. He won't run in the [G1] Irish Champion S. [at Leopardstown Sept. 7]--that's for Trading Leather."

A # will distinguish first-time stakes-winners, a @ will indicate first-time graded stakes-winners, a ▲ will denote a first-time Grade/Group 1 winner, a + will indicate first-time starters, an (S) will be used for state-bred races, a (C) will be used for maiden-claiming races and an (R) will be used for other restricted races.

Golden Soul Fires Bullet for Travers...

Charles Fipke's Golden Soul (Perfect Soul {Ire}), runner-up in the GI Kentucky Derby, tuned up for Saratoga's GI Travers S. with a five-furlong bullet in 1:01.40 over the Oklahoma training track yesterday. Ninth in the GI Belmont S., the chestnut was last seen finishing a well-beaten seventh in the GI Haskell Invitational July 28. "He worked this morning, and he worked great," trainer Dallas Stewart said. "Did it easy, galloped out really good, was on his toes coming home. So, he seems pretty much ready. I'm happy with the way he cooled out and the way he's coming up to the race." Stewart continued, "I know he's good enough to win it if we have him ready. You can't go in there half trained up. You've got to cowboy up and train this son of a gun, and the horse has to prove it to you. We have to be ready and make sure the horse is prepared in a way he's supposed to be prepared, and he's tested every morning with hard training. If he's not capable, we need to do something else."

Fort Larned Breezes for Woodward...

GI Breeders' Cup Classic hero Fort Larned (E Dubai), a disappointing fifth as the 6-5 favorite in the GI Whitney H. Aug. 3, worked four furlongs in :48.20 at Saratoga Thursday. The Janis Whitham homebred is being aimed at the GI Woodward S. Aug. 31. "Everything was good," trainer Ian Wilkes reported. "He went well and we're very pleased. It was just a maintenance half, and the Woodward is still our target."

JOCKEY CLUB RESPONDS TO CLONING CASE

A federal judge in Texas ruled Monday that the American Quarter Horse Association must begin accepting registration of cloned horses, making it the first breed organization to do so.

The case began last year when two Texas breeders sued the AQHA, stating the organization was operating a monopoly by excluding clones. Last month, a jury sided with the breeders, ruling that the AQHA was violating anti-monopoly laws by excluding cloned animals from its registry.

Yesterday, The Jockey Club provided the following statement when asked about the implications for Thoroughbreds: "The facts involved in the AQHA case are very different from those applicable to the registration of Thoroughbreds and the decision in that case has no bearing on the rules for registering Thoroughbreds. The Jockey Club, as an organization dedicated to the improvement of Thoroughbred racing and breeding, believes that the short- and long-term welfare of the sport of Thoroughbred racing and the Thoroughbred breed are best served by the current rules."

STABLELAB: A REVOLUTION IN EQUINE BLOOD TESTING by Kelsey Riley

Five years ago, former Irish show jumper Heinrich Anhold set out to revitalize the process of equine blood testing. The 32-year-old entrepreneur was convinced he could simplify the process of detecting infection in horses and, a little more than a month ago, he launched his new product StableLab to much acclaim.

StableLab, a handheld blood analyzer, makes it possible to detect infection within minutes at the horse's side. It works by identifying and measuring Serum Amyloid A (SAA)--a protein produced by the liver to carry immune cells to the source of inflammation--in the horse's blood. Under normal, healthy conditions, SAA will be present at a level lower than 7.5 $\mu\text{g/ml}$, and will not be reflected on the StableLab test. However, SAA levels will begin to rise within 12 to 24 hours of the onset of infection, and will generally reach levels of 30-200 $\mu\text{g/ml}$, depending on the onset and level of infection. StableLab makes it possible to detect infection before the horse begins to display outward signs.

"It can be used at the horse's side, and delivers a result within 10 minutes," Anhold explained. "It's very simple to use; there are just a few steps involved and pretty much anyone can do them."

As Anhold notes, the process is relatively straight forward. First, purchase a StableLab test--€25 (US$32) each, or €18 (US$24) each for 30 or more tests. Take a blood sample, and place a few drops on the StableLab cartridge. A control line will appear to show the test has worked, and about 10 minutes later a test line will appear if SAA is present. If SAA is not present--and thus there is no infection--the test line will not appear. In the event of a test line, the handler can then compare the shade of the test line to the reference card included with the test to determine the level of severity of the infection (the darker the shade, the more severe the infection). The cartridges can then be stored for later comparison if necessary.

"In terms of interpreting the test, it's a very simple yes/no result, and that's the big difference between what StableLab delivers and what a lab report delivers," Anhold noted.

While much of the early research on StableLab has been conducted in Thoroughbred racing stables in the UK, Ireland and France, a handful of American veterinarians have been testing the product over the last couple of months.

One such vet is Dr. Nathan Slovis of Hagyard Equine Medical Institute in Kentucky.

"We have been using StableLab for the past number of months in our clinical practice," Slovis said. "We find that it is an earlier and more sensitive indicator of equine inflammatory and infectious diseases than other lab methods. StableLab is a breakthrough in stall side equine diagnostics, and presents a new way of blood testing. I would recommend that any equine practitioner consider using StableLab in their practice."

Tony McLean

Dr. Slovis was alongside Anhold at the official launch of StableLab at the Dublin Horse Show Aug. 9, where he, along with fellow American veterinarians Dr. Bonnie Barr, Dr. Fairfield Bain and Dr. Keith Latson, threw his support behind the product.

"The beauty of this product is in its simplicity," Anhold said. "You don't need to send your blood sample to a lab and you don't need a PhD to interpret the results. As someone who has competed at the RDS on Show Day, I know what you need from your horse and the value of being able to confirm on the spot that your horse is good to compete. We've worked really hard over the last few years to design a product that brings together the science and the technology, in a way that works for the industry. To receive support now from Dr. Slovis, Dr. Barr, Dr. Bain and Dr. Latson is fantastic, and such an endorsement for a company at our stage in development."

StableLab has also been endorsed by a number of leading European racehorse trainers, including legendary Irishman Jim Bolger.

"We have been using StableLab for the past six months and have found it very useful for assessing our horses' well being," Bolger said.

Martin Pipe, a racehorse trainer based in Somerset, England, has found StableLab useful for pre-race testing.

"I use StableLab for pre-performance testing coming up to a race," he said. "It gives me a clear indication as to whether my horse may have an infection. StableLab gives me an extra measure of confidence and, unlike other blood tests, there is no guess work involved in figuring out the result. It can't guarantee you a winner, but you know that it delivers cold hard facts on your horse's health status."

Anhold added: "Trainers like to use it before a race to test whether the horse is clean to run. We find that they are using it the day before a race to see if their horses have an infection or not. Some trainers in addition like to do routine tests, and they test once a week in some of the really intensive places, and once a month in the yards where they're more worried about viruses coming into the yard." Cont. p9

Anhold noted that he sold out of stock within a week of launching StableLab at the end of June, with orders as far afield as the U.S. and Australia despite the fact that he has yet to begin marketing there. He is also receiving interest from disciplines outside racing.

“Some show jumpers have bought our product to use after traveling,” he noted. “When they travel quite a lot internationally, their fear is that their horse might pick up viruses during transport, and they are testing their horses when they arrive at certain locations. We had one show jumper buy it in the U.S., who was worried about his horse having EPM.”

The good news for veterinarians is that StableLab is about to simplify the process even further, with a priority club for vets and an expanded line of products. As a member of the priority club, vets can earn a commission on reselling StableLab to their clients.

“If they sell a box to their clients and the client finds the horse has an infection, the vet knows before he goes there that he’s going to sell a number of follow-up treatments, and it makes his day very productive,” Anhold explained. “Otherwise, he may go there and take a blood test and give some antibiotics and then have to make a second visit. With our test, it’s making their day more efficient, because they go there having a good idea what’s wrong with the horse.”

As Anhold and his team continue to market StableLab globally in the coming months, they are also preparing to launch a handful of new products. In October, a handheld reader will be available to allow the user to quantify results, rather than simply comparing the cartridges by eye. At the same time, an iPhone app will be released that will allow one to store information and build trends over time. The next StableLab cartridge, which Anhold estimates should be ready for release by the end of the year, will be a test for tying up, or rhabdomyolysis.

As part of his promotional tour, Anhold plans to visit Thoroughbred racehorse stables in Saratoga Springs, New York at the end of August. For more information, visit StableLab.com.

Heading to Deauville, but don't want to pay €600 a night to stay in one of the big hotels downtown? Enjoy a beautiful garden-like setting within walking distance to the beach and town center at the Villa Josephine for about a third of the price. My wife Lynda and I discovered this gem of a boutique hotel at the recommendation of Michel Henochsburg while on a family vacation in 2011, and it was ideal for going racing, to dinner in town or the sales. Done in the traditional Normandy styling, the hotel was built at the end of the 19th Century and was owned by the mayor of Deauville and personal doctor to the Duke de Morny, credited with building the seaside resort. Each room is named after a figure in the Duke's life. The hotel is in a quiet residential neighborhood with free on-street parking. A private gated entrance opens onto a garden courtyard, where one may relax with an aperitif under a canopy of shade trees. Rooms on the ground floor open onto the garden and second story rooms have a small balcony from which guests can see the sea off in the distance. For the demanding American traveler, the hotel offers air conditioning, wifi and internet access in each room. Tip: at €18 per person, skip the breakfast (even though served in a lovely, sun-filled room overlooking the garden) and walk to the nearby patisserie.

Le 21 is a must visit in Deauville during the sales. It is one of the closest walks from the sale and the food does not disappoint. The scallops are excellent if you're looking for a recommendation. Le atmosphere is a charming black and white decor and Le dress code is casual. For those of you who sing loudly alone in the car (you know who you are), karaoke takes place after dinner and one usually ends an evening at 21 dancing.

Drakkar is also fun with great food. The Siro's of Deauville, where people gather after the sales for drinks (and delicious food). Men, you can leave your tie at home. Pack jeans and prepare to wear jeans every night. Also prepare to have the best food you have ever tasted no matter which restaurant you visit in Deauville.

This restaurant is a long walk from the sales grounds, on the other side of town, but a nice walk, and offers in my view the best cuisine in town. It's an established place, but kind of apart from all of the traditional places that people go to. Over the last three or four years, I've seen more of the guys from the sales go there. If you're looking for a great meal, this is a great place to go. The chef is Michel Saggiro, who uses a lot of the products from the region and the market. He adds a kind of Italian accent to his food with some of his signature dishes, like risotto with truffles and scallops. He makes a really good foie gras. His turbot is excellent, as is his veal chop, my personal favorite. Booking is strongly recommended. It's kind of a fun atmosphere where you order everything off a blackboard. The chef comes around and greets all the guests so you get to see the man who is preparing your food. There are really fun desserts if you have room afterwards, many, of course, containing apples, since you're in Normandy.

D-DAY HISTORY

Just an hour or so west of Deauville lies the Cotentin Peninsula, famous of course, as the site of the D-Day landings. While everyone loves Deauville in August, I have to confess...I love the regions to the West--Western Calvados, the Bocage, and the landing beaches--even more. If, like myself, you find yourself with an extra day in Normandy due to the shortened sale, check out some great historical sites just a short drive

OVERLORD TOURS

If you're going to go the beaches, it's best to do so with a tour guide, who will not only navigate the roads for you and take you to the main beaches and historical sites, like St. Mere Eglise and the American cemetery, but will also point out fascinating things along the way that the casual observer would never pick up. The distinctive fencing on almost every gate you see in the area, for example, came from the mesh laid down to make American airfields just after the invasion. After the war, it was cut up by farmers to re-use in their fencing, where it is still in use today, 70 years later. Overlord Tours is the main tour operator in the area and offers 10 different full, half- or two-day tours. They also offer the option to do a private tour, which we chose and highly recommend. This allows you to avoid the drive into Bayeux to meet up with the tour group and have them come to you instead. One note: be prepared to tip your tour guide. Heavily.

In addition to the beaches, there are several historical sites well worth visiting, which offer a real glimpse inside how the day was won. For the invasion to succeed, the Allies would need to be supplied with an estimated 26,000 tons of supplies each day. Several local sites help you to realize just how difficult and critical opening these supply routes were, and how easily it could have gone awry. My favorite two were:

PEGASUS BRIDGE MEMORIAL

Avenue du Major Howard, Ranville, France
(+ 33) 02 31 78 19 44

www.memorial-pegasus.org

The story of Pegasus Bridge was made famous in the film The Longest Day. The taking of the bridge was critical in keeping the Germans from sending reinforcements to the beaches, and in allowing the Allies to bring supplies inland. The curator of the museum, Mark Worthington, gives a spectacular English-language tour, telling the tale of how the British 6th Airborne were the first troops to arrive in France on June 6th. The Germans had loaded the bridge with explosives and planned to destroy it if the invasion came to pass, which would have choked off the invasion forces from any supplies. Unlike other Allied divisions, which were way off the mark, the 6th Airborne landed at the bridge in wooden gliders with pinpoint accuracy and in complete silence, took the bridge after a 10-minute fight, and held in intact to enable the seaborne reinforcements to cross. The tour takes you over the original bridge, now at the museum; inside a wooden Horsa glider; and describes the engineering marvel of the Bailey Bridge. Worthington is a fascinating guide, and this was not only the most interesting historical tour of this visit, but the most interesting museum tour I have ever taken.

The original Pegasus Bridge is now part of the museum.

THE ARTIFICIAL HARBOR AT ARROMANCHES

Place du 6 Juin
14117 Arromanches

Phone number : +33 (0)2 31 22 34 31

Realizing that the invading forces would need to be kept in constant supply, the Germans had heavily fortified the port cities of Cherbourg and Le Havre. Churchill had a brilliant solution around this: to build an artificial harbor, the components of which would be built in Britain, floated across the channel and then assembled on the Normandy coast in a place the Germans never would have imagined. Arromanches was liberated on the night of June 6, and the floating pieces of the artificial harbor were already waiting nearby. From the museum in this charming seaside town, you can still see the vestiges of the Mulberry harbor just off the coast. The museum serves as a fascinating guide to how it was achieved. After visiting the museum, climbs the steps up the very steep hillside and take in the immersive film Arromanches 360, where you stand in a room with a film which plays in 360 degrees around you.

THE GERMAN WAR CEMETERY AT ORGLANDES
Orglandes, France

There are over a dozen major war cemeteries in Normandy, and while the American cemetery is the most well-known, we found this unheralded German war burial ground very sobering and in a way, very moving. Driving from our rental home in nearby Yvetot-Bocage to the town of Sainte-Mere-Eglise, we came across a sign that said, only in French, "German military cemetery" (Cimetiere Militaire Allemande), and thought we'd stop and take a look. We found the graves of 7,538 men, with four to six men in each grave. Two to three names were inscribed on each side of the gravestones, along with their birthday and the day they died—primarily June 16th to the 20th, when the invading forces arrived in the area. Their names and ages tell the tale of the state of the German army at the time, and the forces which the Germans had left to throw at the Allies. Very young German soldiers, some only 16, are buried alongside 50-year-old Poles and other nationalities who had been conscripted by Axis forces. The 28 rows of gravestones, all a somber grey color, stretch as far as the eye can see in an otherwise completely silent and peaceful orchard, and make a powerful statement about the very real price of war.

CALVADOS AND CIDRE

Of course, there is more to do in Normandy than visit historical sites; there is a lot of eating and drinking to be done. On the latter...two words of wisdom. Calvados is an apple brandy which gets its name from the region where it is produced. Apples are harvested and pressed into a juice that is fermented into a dry cider. It is then distilled into eau de vie. After two years aging in oak casks, it can be sold as Calvados. The longer it is aged, the smoother the drink becomes, and the more golden or amber it becomes. You'll see a lot of clear to light yellow Calvados around. Stay away from it. It tastes like lighter fluid. In the region, it seems like every other farm is also selling cider. One day, I thought I'd bring some home for the four kids on the trip with us, only to find it had an alcohol content of 5%. I went back the next day and asked where they kept the non-alcoholic cider, and was told there was no such thing. "That would be apple juice," said the farmer. I told him that in America, we had apple juice and apple cider, neither of which were alcoholic. He concluded that Americans were crazy.

NYRA Raises $100K During Fabulous Fillies Day:

Edited Press Release

Saratoga Race Course was flooded by a sea of pink on Wednesday as the New York Racing Association hosted its annual Fabulous Fillies Day, raising more than $100,000 for the Breast Cancer Research Foundation. The main event was the Sizzling Hot Pink Saratoga Hat Luncheon presented by Escada in the At the Rail Pavilion. Escada, which is celebrating its 35th anniversary this year, hosted a boutique where guests were given the opportunity to shop from its 2013 Fall Collection, with 20% of the proceeds donated to the BCRF. "The New York Racing Association is committed to support breast cancer research through its partnership with the Breast Cancer Research Foundation," NYRA CEO & President Chris Kay said. "We will continue to host events that impact our community in positive ways."

The bay was taken in hand out of the gate and raced near the back of the pack. He trailed in last as pacesetter Kharafa took the field through an opening half in :48.96. He rallied stoutly in the middle of the course into the straight and reeled in the pacesetter late for the first stakes victory of his career. "He was a little wide on the first turn, but Irad [Ortiz, Jr.] said, 'Jay, I didn't want to strangle him back.' Once he got over on the backside, he was fine. The subject of significant support into 11-4 favoritism in this race--won in recent times by Sea the Stars (Ire) and Galileo Rock (Ire) (Galileo {Ire})--which drew an assortment of bluebloods, Free Eagle was quickly into a perfect position against the rail behind the leading duo. Granted a gap at the top of the stretch, the bay was through without hesitation passing the quarter pole and opened up in impressive fashion to register a 5 1/2-length success from Orchestra (Ire) (Galileo {Ire}), the immediate relative of Moonstone (GB) (Dalakhani {Ire}), Cerulean Sky (Ire) (Darshaan {GB}) and L'Ancrese (Ire) (Darshaan {GB}). Wexford Town (Ire) (Teofilo {Ire}), the full-brother to Trading Leather (Ire), was 1 1/4 lengths further back in third. "He did what I expected him to," Dermot Weld commented. "He's a lovely colt and so relaxed. I would expect he'll come out of this well and have one more run this season. That could be in the G2 Beresford S. [at The Curragh Sept. 29] or G1 Racing Post Trophy [at Doncaster Oct. 26]. He's a stayer with speed with the attitude, temperament and confirmation that a good horse needs." The winner is a half to Sapphire (Ire) (Medicean {GB}), Hwt. Older Mare-Ire at 11-14f, MGSW & G1SP-Ire & GSW-Eng, $518,923; and Custom Cut (Ire) (Notnowcato {GB}), GSW-Ire, $132,120. Kicking in early stretch, the €24,000 TATIRE yearling kept up the gallop to score by 2 3/4 lengths from the promising debutante My Titania (Ire) (Sea the Stars {Ire}), the first of the sire's progeny to race in the same Tsui silks that he carried. "She was second first time out, which is a big achievement for one of ours and so I thought she'd run well here," trainer Eddie Lynam commented. "She is qualified for the Tattersalls Ireland Super Auction Sales S. Off the mark by six lengths over five furlongs at Sandown July 25, Shamshon was a warm order to follow that impressive effort with a first black-type success here. He was waited with in rear early and moved into contention inside the final quarter by Frankie Dettori. The bay took over from the determined Aventure Love with 50 meters to race and drew away late. "He's a lovely looking colt who we paid a lot of money for last year," Richard Hannon, Jr. commented. "He won very well and six furlongs is better than five, even though he has a lot of speed. It's quite probable that he will go straight to the G1 Middle Park S. [at Newmarket Oct. 12]."

After opening his account at Fontainebleau Apr. 26, Destruct was disappointing when a distant fourth in the Listed Derby du Midi, won by the subsequent Pattern-race performer Chalnetta (Fr) (Oratorio {Ire}) over 12 furlongs at Bordeaux-le-Bouscat May 25. Subsequently slamming the listed-placed Vayakhan (Fr) (Dalakhani {Ire}) by four lengths when moved up to 1 3/4 miles in a conditions event at Chantilly June 12, the bay drew on more stamina reserves to record a first black-type win here. Held up early off the honest tempo, he was delivered wide in the straight and, after taking command with 300 meters remaining, asserted for a comfortable success. "He has developed into a nice type and quickened well off a fast pace and stays well," Juddmonte's Racing Manager Teddy Grimthorpe said. "He will probably run next in the G3 Prix de Lutece [at Longchamp Sept. 8]."

Silvano, Sail From Seattle Colts Top First Session of National Sale

Silvano (Ger), officially crowned South Africa's 2012/13 Champion Sire at that country's Equus Awards Wednesday night, kept his hot streak alive when responsible for the co-session topper of yesterday's Emperors Palace National 2-Year-Old Sale in Johannesburg. Out of the Camden Park mare Sensational Secret (SAf), the bay colt was picked up by Varsfontein Stud from the draft of Howell's Racing for R400,000 (US$40,053). Later in the session, a colt by Sail From Seattle--a close-relative to leading American sire Smart Strike--equalled top billing when hammered down to Misty Meadows from the draft of Ascot Stud. The bay, from the second South African crop of Sail From Seattle, is from the family of international Group 1 winner Irridescence (SAf) (Caesour). A colt by leading sire Var registered the second highest price of the day when bringing R340,000 (US$34,045) from agent John Freeman. The colt was consigned by Litchfield Stud. The second and final session of the sale will take place today.
